1. On 15 September 1951, a large number of men in the area of Sezana, Yugoslavia, were called up for a three-month tour of active military duty with the Army. On reporting for duty, the men were immediately sent by train from Sezana to an unspecified place near Gospic in the Lika, where they were put to work at constructing a large factory, under the supervision of a Yugoslav Army Officer. It is reported that this factory will manufacture tanks and heavy weapons. Included among the workers is a large number of semi-invalid Partisans who were wounded in the last war.
2. An unspecified large number of men from the district of Vrsac, Yugoslavia, were called up for a three-month tour of military duty in early October 1951. Some of these men were sent to Bosnia, where they were put to work building military fortifications.
